CHICAGO, IL – SEPTEMBER 7, 2007 — The project recruitment and interim staffing solutions entrepreneurs and corporate decision makers' need are closer at hand today than they've ever been. Why? Because Chicago's premiere professional services firm, cavalryHR has announced that top producer Cherri Hand has joined their Industrial Products & Services targeted market development team. More than just a contract recruiting service, cavalryHR offers temporary and temp-to-permanent professional staffing solutions aimed at helping business in the Industrial Products and Services sector fill positions best-suited to the talents of an interim candidate.

Mrs. Hand is only the latest addition to cavalryHR's growing market development team.

Known for offering a range of innovative and effective staffing and recruiting services; cavalry HR's strategic human resource solutions have focused squarely on targeting professional, managerial and executive, sales, marketing, back office and high-tech talent capable of making a positive impact on an organization whether it's based in Bangalore or Boca Raton. Moreover, their consultants can also help to study and improve their client's recruiting processes, enabling them to select the right people at right time and use their recruiting dollars more effectively. CavalryHR's solutions improve the staffing process for human resource managers, executives and candidates.

"It's not one of those things you hear a lot, but the simple fact of the matter is that Interim professionals are a cost-effective alternative to expensive hourly consultants," offered Keith S. Price cavalryHR's president and founder. "They give a variety of organizations access to seasoned professionals at a reasonable price. They literally balance the personnel playing field."

"We're delighted to have Cherri on board, her wide sector experience will be a true asset and her terrific enthusiasm is a perfect fit for our Industrial Services team," Price went on to say.

"We provide a range of interim recruiting services based on what is best for our clients in the Industrial products and services industry," offered Jack Williams, cavalry HR's Vice President of Client Relations. "We soak up our client's needs, ask questions about their culture, their organization, business model, mission statement – all so we'll be better able to tackle the specific challenges they face when it come to attracting and retaining in-demand professionals. Then we provide scalable staffing and recruiting solutions suited to their businesses and individual needs."

"This may sound counterintuitive, but tailoring our approach is actually what give us the dexterity to recruit successfully across a variety of industries and functional disciplines from sales and marketing to finance, accounting, manufacturing, legal, and even information technology," added Price.

Currently cavalry HR maintains consulting offices in Chicago, Dallas, Atlanta and Boca Raton. More information about the Chicago-based recruiting solutions firm is available at: cavalryhr.com.
